What you'll study

This degree delivers advanced professional learning for qualified teachers and those with a professional involvement in education, including school bursars, school development officers and training personnel. It can also contribute to current teachers' professional development requirements. As a graduate, you'll be able to apply knowledge and skills in a range of contexts for professional practice or scholarship.

Majors

Through the degree, you'll develop greater expertise in educational practice or research and can choose to specialise in one of four award majors:

- English, Multiliteracies and New Media
- Leadership, Policy and Social Transformation
- Children, Childhood and Identity
- Youth, Digital Culture and New Learning.

Career opportunities

You will be able to meet individual professional learning and research development needs. The degree also allows you to gain significant professional advantages in advancing your education career.

Please note that this degree is not an initial teacher education program and will not lead to registration as a teacher in Queensland schools.

Master of Education graduate Trang Thai credits her Griffith degree with giving her the knowledge and skills to be able to work in educational settings both in Australia and her home country of Vietnam. 'I chose Griffith University because of its reputation and high ranking in education,' she said. 'I enjoyed studying at Griffith. My lecturers were fantastic and the support I received as an international student was excellent.'
